

My dearest prawn,

HAPPY BIRTHDAY BABY!!! I've been so excited it's just a celebration of my favorite in the entire world. when I think of your birthday, it takes me back to coming over for the very first time, being nervous to meet your people and be in your room, and then hugging you for an extended period. that's also when I wrote my first ever letter to you. it was such a different time, we were still so new to it all. so much has changed since then, mostly in the best ways.

I'm the luckiest in the world to be your person and by your side spiritually but only for a while for all the decades to come. you're simply an incredible person and I admire you so deeply. you're so talented, so smart, and have the most fantastic taste, it's honestly really hot. also, you're breathtaking and it's excruciating to think about. I have the most enormous crush on you and I always will. you're just the best person there could be and I entirely love everything about you. no one could feel sweeter and more patient and understanding. I love your mind and how it works. I love how undeniably affectionate your gaze is. I love the feeling of your very sexy hands on me. I love hearing you laugh and your voice being the first thing I wake up to. I love being loved by you.

my favorite thing about you really is the way you love so deeply and the endless amount of it that you have to give. I'm certainly god's favorite because she gave your love to me.

it really does pain me that I can't be there on your birthday but it's also still great knowing you'll have a wonderful day given the number of people who love you so much. in a couple years though, I'll do the most for your birthday. there'll be those overpriced fancy legos and the children will have tiny party hats and I'll (try to) cook something great and maybe I'll do all of that in a cropped tank. maybe. also there'll just be so much sex, but that's a different conversation. it's just going to be so very fun and I can't wait for my potential to not be this limited because I want to do everything ever for you.

also, I know summer was very rough for both of us but I really do think a lot about how someday we'll both lie on each other on our cozy couch and maybe we'll cry about summer sometimes but we'll talk and hold each other and pet our animals and it would be alright. nothing would ever hurt us again. also what if I threw a twilight birthday party. or hsm and foursythe wears a wildcats jersey. that could be so fun.

this is definitely maybe my most disorganized letter but that's okay I think. I think I'm calmer about everything with you actually. you really do make me so comfortable, you reassure me the excessive amount I ask for, you really just do everything I could ever need and more. it's already known that I never feel safer and more well than when I'm with you. talking to you recently has actually made me feel close to the feeling of being right next to you, and it's the best, I want to kick my feet and giggle thinking about it. also your birthday with me will have a ridiculous quantity of balloons.

all in all, you're the best and I'm blessed to get to spend the rest of my life with you. I will continue to wait for you, terribly impatiently, but I will wait however long for the day to come when we are finally together and I will never leave your side again.

I love you so much Anrita, you're everything to me and always will be. happy birthday sweetheart <3 helplessly yours,

shreya